Empathy and Compassion: The Courageous Leadership Choice

October 25, 2017 | 9AM – 4PM

What You Will Learn

Leaders are saddled with compassion fatigue. We have tried emotional intelligence and the people were happier but the results were still the same. We have tried to take a more courageous approach and our associates screamed, "Foul!" Every organization has challenges. We have been focused on the challenges and avoiding the opportunities and our collective engagement has hovered around 30% for years as a result. Frequently, demonstrating the courage necessary to move organizations forward feels disconnected from the engagement and happiness of the people. Here's the paradox; the solution to these challenges lie in our courageous choice to lead empathetically and compassionately.

Happiness matters! We must become willing to admit that our way of leading is simply not working – not creating the results or the quality of life that we would like. These times are calling for a new type of leader. We need leaders who are willing and able to adjust their mindsets, their own and the mentalities of others, in order to lead in a new and revolutionary way. Leadership requires courage, empathy and compassion. Participants will learn simple strategies for improving the outcomes and becoming even better coaches and leaders.

Key Topics

- Understand the principles of empathic and compassionate leadership
- Learn how to apply the courage-principles to your workplace and in your coaching opportunities
- Re-evaluate the work leaders have done to date in their organization so that they can transform their tools, programs, and philosophies into ones that actually work and that leaders will actually use

Who Should Attend

Leaders who have decision-making and team leadership responsibilities, particularly appropriate for mid-level, emerging, and next generation of leaders.

About the Instructor

Nicole Price understands that if leadership is anything, it is personal, and that everyone can be a great leader. So she gets personal. Nicole's transparency allows others to learn from her mistakes and helps them avoid the same pitfalls. She gets real. She will tell you, yes, having differences within a team can be harder, but that hard work can really pay off — both professionally and personally. And she gets wise. She'll tell you, in a heartbeat, how she's gotten a few things wrong over the years, but a little grace and some solid coaching saved her.

Through leadership development, coaching, consulting, keynotes, and other resources, Nicole encourages and enables others to live their lives in excellence. Her energetic and engaging sessions leave participants with strategies and specific tools that they can apply right away. Her lively presentation style garners rave reviews and, very often, an invitation to return. Nicole received her B.S. in chemical engineering from North Carolina A&T University and her master's degree in adult education from Park University.
