The Department of Public Affairs' mission is to educate and support leaders in urban public administration, particularly in government, health care, and nonprofit sectors. Its preeminent programs of graduate degree and non-degree educations, scholarly and applied research, public service and community problem-solving initiatives provide our students with the theoretical and practical foundation necessary to assume leadership positions in public administration.

Our Programs:

Traditional MPA - Choosing a master's degree in public administration allows individuals to gain the knowledge and technical skills to pursue careers in private organizations, non-profit associations and government sectors. Students and alumni may find employment in city, state or federal government offices, nonprofits, health care organizations, social services and educational institutions depending on their experience and skills. Students complete the program at their own pace, with the average completion time of 3 years.

Executive MPA - The EMPA degree program is designed to meet the needs of the advanced mid-career professional. With a focus on executive leadership in the public, nonprofit and health care sectors, the E.M.P.A. provides specialized executive education for individuals with proven professional experience. Immersion courses include Executive Leadership and Washington, DC and South Africa residencies. This is a 22-month cohort program with students proceeding through it as a group, creating a network of professional peers. The tuition includes all textbooks and software, the services of an Executive Coach and a 360 Degree Feedback.

Graduate Certificates - These 18 credit professional certificate programs are targeted to community representatives, graduate students and professionals seeking advanced education:

- Graduate Certificate in Urban Policy and Administration- Students gain the knowledge to assume leadership roles in governmental and nonprofit organizations working on urban issues.
- Graduate Certificate in Nonprofit Management and Innovation - The program aids students in acquisition of the knowledge, skills and abilities needed to pursue and advance in nonprofit management.
